

Health and safety

At Haley & Aldrich, we're committed to weaving health and safety into the fabric of everything we do.

Promoting a safe and healthy workplace

At Haley & Aldrich, we understand that the best way to promote health and safety is to ensure it's an embedded tenet of our culture. That's why we integrate health and safety into all facets of our business operations – in the field, our technical work, and our offices. As a result, our staff tells us they're even practicing more safe behaviors in their personal lives.

Our goal is to ensure our staff returns home each day at least as healthy as they were when they entered the workplace. We actively work to achieve that goal through our iterative "Plan, Do, Check, Adjust" cycle. This helps our dedicated health and safety team to continually improve our safety systems, tools, and training.

We strive to achieve a zero-injury workplace and our industry-leading Experience Modification Rate (EMR) is an indicator that we are moving in the right direction. We get closer each day by arming our staff with the tools and training they need to not only identify unsafe systems, processes, situations, and behaviors, but ensure they are empowered to take action when necessary.

Award-winning program

Over the years, the industry — and our clients — have recognized the excellence of Haley & Aldrich's health and safety program. Some of these awards include:

- The Remediation Management Contractor's Performance Award from BP: reserved for contractors that deliver exceptional safety while completing high-risk work
- The prestigious Silver-level Boeing Performance Excellence Award: one of the award's five key performance indicators includes health and safety excellence
- Signify's Best Health & Safety Field Performance for Environmental Affairs: awarded to Haley & Aldrich multiple years in a row
