

Mining

We deliver value to stakeholders so our mining clients can succeed.

Business success for mining operations hinges on productively partnering with governments, agencies, community advocacy groups, and non-government organizations to satisfy stakeholders' needs. At the same time, environmental policies and regulations are expanding, and mine operators are facing increasing pressure to reduce operational costs that erode returns on investments.

Haley & Aldrich recognizes that you require a mining consulting partner that not only keeps you ahead of regulatory changes, but who listens and understands the complexities of this dynamic industry. As passionate advocates for the mining industry, we participate in the industry associations, decision-making bodies, and community organizations that have the most impact on your projects — and bring that collaboration to bear for your benefit.

We know your mining projects must navigate complex permitting processes, evolving environmental regulations, and collaboration with local communities. Our mining consulting teams work alongside your internal groups and stakeholders to minimize obstacles and to find win-win solutions for your mining company, regulators, and the communities in which you operate.

Talk to our market expert

Dustin Wasley

Market Leader, Mining

Capturing value and efficiency with a fresh set of eyes for your mining projects

Haley & Aldrich's team of mining consultants doesn't believe in cookie-cutter approaches to address your unique operational and permitting challenges. Our vast experience in mining environmental consulting allows us to look at every situation with fresh eyes, aiming to deliver the greatest outcomes with the fewest resources. This approach to mining consulting services doesn't necessarily result in short-term gain for us, but it does mean long-term value for you. And because of that, our mining clients trust us to thoughtfully deliver a winning strategy throughout the mining lifecycle — from feasibility studies to resource development and through post closure.

The Haley & Aldrich team looks at mining project challenges holistically, putting your goals first to help capture unexpected value and efficiency. Our mining consulting business serves the following mining sectors:

- Aggregate and construction materials

- Base and precious metals
- Industrial and critical minerals

As a company that sees beyond the status quo, Haley & Aldrich offers a fresh perspective — opening opportunities to move mining businesses forward, support sustainable success for the industry, and safely reclaim mines. Reach out to learn more about how our expert mining engineering consultants can help.