Haley & Aldrich tackles complex construction challenges with a focus on safety, collaboration, and cost-effective project solutions.

When your project is complex and time-sensitive, you need more than a contractor — you need a partner who brings deep technical expertise and offers flexible delivery options. You need a partner who can manage deadlines, budgets, and design challenges proactively and act responsively when something in the field doesn't go as planned. You need safety, environmental, and regulatory considerations integrated into every step of the process to protect your team, your timeline, and your investments.

Haley & Aldrich's construction services team integrates in-house construction professionals, engineers, and technical experts to deliver high-quality results quickly and efficiently. Whether you need design-build, construction management, or turnkey solutions, we tailor our approach to meet your goals and keep your project moving forward. A bonded, full-service national environmental remediation contractor, Haley & Aldrich delivers quality work on large, challenging projects, and we provide valuable support in risk management, cost estimation, constructability review, and project sequencing. Our professionals have the construction expertise and resources to both plan and complete the work, offering comprehensive turnkey solutions.

Clients relying on our construction services also benefit from Haley & Aldrich's broader design and engineering expertise. As a construction contractor embedded in a multidisciplinary firm that advises on contaminated site management, water resources, and more, we are well positioned to engage the right experts early to minimize risks and enhance project predictability. The design-build approach also eliminates the stress and cost of finding contractors and provides an efficient approach while allowing maximum project flexibility.
