

EHS strategy and management

We take a full-system view to mitigate today's EHS challenges and eliminate tomorrow's uncertainties.

Environmental, health, and safety (EHS) management is a complex and high-pressure job. You work hard to maintain compliance yet continually feel pressure to go beyond compliance. You may have noticed that employees are starting to lose focus on compliance, competitors are outpacing you in certain areas, or you're getting increased pressure from clients and shareholders to ensure business continuity. You know it's crucial to get ahead of EHS management, or risk falling behind.

Haley & Aldrich's team of EHS strategy and management experts take a full-system view of your business operation, rather than focusing on a single problem. We understand that environmental, safety, and operational standards need to complement one another. That's why our EHS management consultants work to uncover misalignment and design strategies and solutions to ensure smooth, safe, and environmentally sound operations. We provide actionable insights and recommend strategies and solutions only once we fully and deeply understand how they'll impact your business's EHS risk in the long term.

Our approach to EHS risk mitigation is anything but standard: We take the time to understand your culture, business needs, and stakeholder expectations. We also mine historical EHS data and industry trends to uncover best practices for our clients. Our teams have decades of EHS experience and create thoughtful solutions designed specifically to address the EHS goals of your business while also striving for operational excellence.

EHS management consulting that tackles today's compliance and sustainability challenges – and sets you up for future operational success

At Haley & Aldrich, we know that the success of your business is about more than compliance. It's about improving operations and EHS practices by training your staff, evaluating and prioritizing your operational risks, ensuring business continuity, and making data more manageable so you can better strategize for the future. When you don't have the internal resources to take on these larger, strategic EHS initiatives, we work alongside your internal teams and stakeholders.

Our EHS strategy team knows technical excellence is required, but your success also hinges on communication and collaboration. That's why we deeply listen to you and your stakeholders to gain an in-depth understanding of your culture, operations, existing safety protocols, and desired outcomes. Our ability to do so allows us to develop EHS compliance management solutions that are specific to your business and set you up for long-term, continued success.

We provide EHS strategy and management services to the following markets:
