

Solid and hazardous waste

We take on your problems as our own to ensure you get ahead of — and stay in — compliance.

Hazardous waste management is a complicated and nuanced process. Navigating the permitting process, understanding complex regulations, and upholding safety standards are difficult enough. But staff shortages, employee turnover, regulatory changes, or other problems can exacerbate these challenges — and leave you unprepared to develop and maintain waste stream processes that ensure long-term environmental compliance.

The hazardous waste consulting team at Haley & Aldrich understands these challenges. When it comes to solving them, our key word is “we.” We don’t view ourselves as separate from our clients. We shoulder your problems as our own, from performing an environmental assessment to the first stages of the permitting process to developing employee training initiatives, contingency plans, and reporting strategies. We even manage hazardous waste programs for some of our clients — a true extension of their team.

We understand you need a hazardous waste consulting partner that not only deeply understands your goals and takes personal ownership of your challenges but can work with you to find innovative solutions to efficiently address them.

HALEY ALDRICH

How do we deliver on that? One example is the digital approach we take as part of our process to assess a facility's ability to satisfy existing solid and hazardous waste compliance obligations. We use a custom tablet program, which streamlines the verification process and ensures we are as thorough as possible. This ultimately prepares your facilities to proactively respond to issues before they become problems.

Taking a collaborative, evidence-based approach to hazardous waste management

When it comes to working with regulators, Haley & Aldrich's compliance experts have learned that evidence and collaboration are the keys to success. And that knowledge is based on decades of experience working with regulators across the country. Throughout your project, our deeply experienced hazardous waste consultants are at the table with you as partners, working together with regulators to find solutions that satisfy both your needs and regulators'.

Because we are in a unique position as engrained members of your team, we can combine your perspectives and specific site needs with our understanding of the nuances of communicating with and providing evidence to regulators. Ultimately, clients who turn to us for hazardous waste management services tell us that we successfully create plans that work for all stakeholders — and ensure they achieve their hazardous waste disposal goals as efficiently as possible.
